Mr. Goodwin was born January 28, 1852, in Jackson, Miss., he moved to Arkansas at an early age and came to Texas in 1872. Two years later he returned to Arkansas and married Miss Mattie E. Smith, returning with his bride he settled near Arlington and has resided here since that time. He was a member of the Methodist Church and was a regular attendant at all the services until a few years ago when ill health kept him at home.

With the passing of Mr. Goodwin Arlington loses one of its few remaining pioneers. During the 66 years of his residence here he saw the town grow from a small village to the Arlington of today. His efforts and influence helped build the town, the churches and schools. Up until two years ago he made a daily trip to town usually in the early morning and his progress along the streets was slow for his friends would always stop and talk with him for a few moments.

He had been confined to his home for some time and Sunday his children all visited him. His daughter, Mrs. Coffman, and husband took him for a long drive. Returning home late, in the afternoon he and Mrs. Goodwin ate supper and as he was going from the table to his room he fell in the hall. Mrs. Goodwin ran to him to help him up, but he was dead before she reached him. If his family had known the end was so near they could not have done more to make him happy the last day of his life and this will always be a happy memory for them. Arlington grieves with the family in the passing of this good man and the tenderest sympathy is extended to Mrs. Goodwin and the children.

Thursday March 3 Youth Killed In Auto-Truck Wreck

American Airlines and Braniff Airways each have put on an additional ship on their Chicago runs, restoring the four fast plane service to the Windy City. The new schedule calls for the ships to leave Dallas at 9:50 a.m., 1:40 p.m., 5 p.m., and 11 p.m.

Germans feel that the annexation of Austria is a victory which more than compensates for the stigma of the Reich World War defeat. The new Germany surpasses the prewar Germany both in territory, population and strategic position. Hitler has 344,034 square miles of territory to rule over, whereas the Kaiser had only 335,872 square miles in 1914. Hailing Hitler as Der Fueher are 73,700,000 German-speaking people.

THE MAN IN THE GLASS

When you get what you want in your struggle for self
And the world makes you king for a day,
Just go to a mirror and look at yourself,
And see what THAT man has to say.

For it isn't your father or mother or wife
Whose judgment upon you must pass;
The fellow whose verdict counts most in your life
Is the one staring back from the glass.

You may be like Jack Horner and chisel a plum
And think you're a wonderful guy,
But the man in the glass says you're only a bum
If you can't look him straight in the eye.

He's the fellow to please, never mind all the rest,
For he's with you clear up to the end,
And you've passed the most dangerous, difficult test
If the man in the glass is your friend.

You may fool the whole world down the pathway of years
And get pats on the back as you pass,
But your final reward will be heartaches and tears
If you've cheated the man in the glass.

factories in the country. At that time they also built pipe organs, and as Mr. Bennett had worked with his brother-in-law in the pipe organ business in Boston since he was 13 years of age, he was put in charge of the organ department. He later established and became president of the Bennett Organ Co. of Rock Island, Ill., and remained at its head until 1930 when plans were made to move to Fort Worth. The charter was granted and everything looked favorable, but the depression caused the plans to be discontinued and the company went into receivership as have the majority of organ companies throughout the country.

Mr. Bennett had continued to rebuild and service pipe organs in various parts of the state almost up to the time of his death. The Bennett organ was rated as one of the best in the country and he will be greatly missed in that field of work.

Mr. Bennett was an active member of the Presbyterian Church of Arlington and the last place he ever visited was the church two weeks before his death. He was not feeling well at the time and left the dinner table to lie down and never got up again except for a few minutes on Monday morning.

He is survived by his widow, one son, Albert, and two daughters, Mrs. Bernard McGinty and Miss Irene Bennett, and four grandchildren of Rock Island, Ill., and Davenport, Ia., and six sisters, all living in or near Boston, Mass.

Mrs. F. V. Lawrence Rites Held Sunday

Arlington paid tribute to one of its pioneer citizens when funeral services were held at 4 p.m. Sunday at the Methodist Church for Mrs. F. V. Lawrence, 79.

Mrs. Lawrence, who died at the home of her son, Dr. O. V. Lawrence, in Brownsville, Thursday, came to Arlington in 1876 and taught piano for 40 years.

Rev. William H. Cole, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiated at the services. Burial was in the Arlington cemetery. Pallbearers were Webb Rose, Mike Ditto, Sanford Yates, Ray McKnight, Gordon Nichols and Zack Slaughter.

Mrs. Lawrence and her late husband, O. J. Lawrence, moved from Mansfield to a community called Hayter in the Spring of 1876. The Hayter settlement was about a mile east of downtown Arlington.

Mrs. Lawrence often recalled that the community had daily mail brought by stagecoach from Dallas. It was later that year the Texas and Pacific Railway was constructed through the community to Fort Worth.

When the construction crew was stationed near her home, Mrs. Lawrence made biscuits and sold them to the workers.

"When the town was located, it was first called Johnson but because it was so near Johnson Station, the name of Arlington was chosen," Mrs. Lawrence once wrote. "My husband made the rack of pigeon-hole boxes for mail in the Arlington postoffice—the first used in Arlington."

Mrs. Lawrence was a charter member of the Methodist Church here, and she had served as president of the Arlington Music Study Club for a number of years. Her husband and his late sister, Mrs. Mary V. Terrell, the first wife of Capt. J. C. Terrell, established one of the first subscription schools in Fort Worth. It was situated on East Belknap Street.

Mrs. Lawrence, a native of Shelby County, Texas, is survived by her son, three daughters, Mrs. Aileen L. Brown, 2325 Hemphill Street, Fort Worth; Mrs. H. L. Rudmose, Fort Wayne, Ind., and Mrs. William Schofield, Lockhart, and a brother, E. Burroughs, Canyon.

RIFLE BALLS

By E. G. Senter

A new 30-passenger airplane capable of speeding through the sub-stratosphere at 237 miles an hour has been announced by the Curerent-Wright (Curtis-Wright??) Corporation. In addition to the passengers, it will carry a crew of four. Twenty berths can be made-up for night flying.

Since Britain gave India a new constitution a year ago, a complete metamorphosis has taken place in the vast sub-continent with its 350,000,000 people. Under the leadership of Mohandas K. Gandhi, now 69 years old and a more powerful figure in India than ever before, the Indian nationalist party has gained governmental control in seven out of the eleven British provinces, while its influence is steadily spreading through the native Indian States ruled by Maharajas. The party's phenomenal achievements in the first elections held under the new constitution astounded everybody, and none more than Mr. Gandhi himself, who only a year ago declared that the new constitution was not worth looking at.

THE WAGE-HOUR LAW

Monday of this week President Roosevelt put his name to one of the most important and far-reaching laws ever passed by a legislative body. It was the Wage-Hour law, fixing by law the number of hours and rate of pay for workmen in the United States. It will rank with other social legislation enacted by the present democratic administration.

While the amount of pay is small enough, it will be an important beginning in a field which has been subject to the worst abuse in our economic structure. In this machine age where the surplus of labor is the greatest surplus of all, any employer who desires, can easily drive his employes and pay them less than a living wage. Under present conditions, there is no governing of the labor market by supply and demand. It must be done by law.

Under the new law, the minimum wage is 25c an hour and a 44-hour week, or $11.00 per week. Certainly that minimum is small enough. It is hard to see how anybody would expect a man to support a family on less than that.

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

Yet, the most severe opposition to the legislation came from the South. Of course, the reason is easy to guess. The Southern employer, in general, is accustomed to employing negro labor at wages and under conditions worse than slavery, and with this peon labor as a club, he has driven the white laborer into a bondage just as bad as any chattel slavery ever was. It is a sad commentary on our great and rich Southland that we have such people in our midst, but it is true.

However, in Texas, all of our 21 representatives in the lower House except six, voted for the bill. Only a few dominated by employers of negro and Mexican labor stood out against this great piece of social legislation.

Among them was our own Congressman, Fritz G. Lanham. Even Hatton Sumners of Dallas voted for the bill. Just why Lanham voted against it will probably be explained during the present campaign. How a Christian gentleman, who preaches from church pulpits from texts from the Word of God, could vote against his fellow-man receiving a minimum wage of $11.00 a week, when he himself receives $32.50 PER DAY, is something every citizen of this District will want to hear explained. Mr. Lanham's explanation will doubtless be VERY INTERESTING.

T. F. Squires, 92, Dies At His Home In Placid

T. F. Squires, who would have been 92 years old the 15th of July, died at his home in Placid, Texas, Monday morning at five o'clock. Mr. Squires broke his hip about nine weeks ago and due to his age could not recover following the accident. Funeral services were held at the Baptist Church at Placid Monday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock.

He was the father of 13 children, eleven of whom survive. Other survivors are his widow and brother, Jim Squires of Everman. He was the father of Mrs. Patricia Davis and Mrs. Y. A. Wright, both of Arlington.

Mr. Squires was born in 1846 at Lewisburg, Tenn., and came with his parents to Texas by ox wagon in 1858. His mother was a first cousin of President Jeff Davis, and when he heard she was moving to Texas, the wildest and most uncivilized state in the nation, he quit the affairs of his office long enough to go and spend the night with the family. To move to Texas in those days was a tragic event to the members of the family left behind. Mr. Squires bought a ranch in San Saba County for 50 cents per acre and in 1927 this same land sold for $45,000. In 1861 he volunteered for service in the Confederate Army and served throughout the war. He lived in Fort Worth for a number of years before moving to Placid in 1912 where he resided until his death. He had many friends over the state. The many friends of Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Wright extend their sincerest sympathy to them in their bereavement.

Federal Worker Here Auto Wreck Victim

Mrs. Laura Neale Love, 54, regional adviser on home management for the Farm Security Administration in Dallas, was killed instantly Monday afternoon when the light roadster she was driving was demolished in a head-on collision with a Dallas bread truck near Ferris. The truck driver, who was unhurt, was held for questioning by Ellis County officers.

Mrs. Love was en route to College Station for a speaking engagement when the accident occurred, fracturing her skull and her neck. Her body will be sent to Denton, home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Neale, where services will be held. Burial will be in Rockwall, where she formerly lived.

Mrs. Love, who lived at 4606 ½ Gaston, Dallas, was born in Leonard. She attended Texas State College for Women, Ohio State University, George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn., and Columbia University. She had served as instructor in home economics at George Peabody College, the University of Texas, North Texas Agricultural College and John Tarleton College.

In September, 1930, she was appointed supervisor of home economics for North Texas in cooperation with the State Board of Vocation Guidance. She became associated with the FERA in Dallas in April, 1934.

Mrs. Love was named regional adviser for the Rural Resettlement Administration in June, 1936, and retained that position when the RRA became the Farm Security Administration. C. M. Evans, regional director, said a successor will not be appointed for several weeks.

Survivors include her parents, three sisters, Mrs. J. R. Ray of Dallas, Mrs. Charles L. Langston of Amarillo, and Mrs. Roy C. Potts of Belton; and 5 brothers, Robert Burke Neale and Mack Neale of Denton, John Neale, of New Iberia, La., Don Neale of Belton, and Ed Neale of Dallas.

Mrs. Love was head of the home economics department at N.T.A.C. for a number of years, and the news of her death was a great shock to her many friends and pupils in Arlington.

Thursday July 14 Saw the President

Miss Mary Louise Shipper caught an early bus Monday morning and went over to Fort Worth to see President Roosevelt. She was in the line close to where he passed and got a good look. In speaking of it she said she felt just like crying when she saw him, and for what reason she could not say except she felt like she was looking at the greatest man of her time. Miss Shipper is a cum laude high school student.

Thursday July 14 Funeral Services Held For Mrs. Mollie Collins

Funeral services for Mrs. Mollie Collins, 71, who died at her home south of Arlington Sunday night at 9:45, were conducted Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Baptist Church. Rev. Jimmy Morgan, pastor of the Handley Baptist Church, officiated in the absence of Rev. Kermit Melugin, pastor of the Arlington Church, who is away on vacation. Rev. Morgan was assisted by Rev. S. M. Bennett of Arlington. Burial was in the Arlington cemetery with the Moore Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pall bearers were L. M. Darby, V. A. McKee, C. C. Barnes, Munsie Martin, Tom Collins, and Hugh Smith.

Mrs. Collins was the widow of the late Barb Collins. Survivors are one son, Marshall Collins of Dallas; a grandson, Bill Collins, Dallas; and 3 nieces.

Thursday July 21 T. P. Marshall Dies In Mountainburg, Ark.

Friends in Arlington received word Monday of the death of T. P. Marshall at his home in Mountainburg, Ark., Monday. Mr. Marshall is the former owner and manager of Top O' Hill Terrace. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday morning in Greenwood Cemetery, Dallas, the former home of Mr. Marshall.

Survivors are his wife, a half brother, Dunham Marshall, and a half-sister, Mrs. P. Powell of Tyler. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall visited Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hartley in Arlington several weeks ago.

Thursday August 11 RIFLE BALLS By E. G. Senter

In an old office building at 63 Vesey Street, New York, 3,600 WPA white-collar workers are busily engaged on the largest indexing job ever attempted in the history of the world. They are transferring the entire 1920 population census of the United States from musty old volumes to the last word in alphabetical card-index systems. When completed this work will make available the age records of 105,000,000 persons on a total of 57,942,500 cards. The job will take 18 months and will cost about $4,700,000.

It is well to remember that while the collapse of a great airplane, and the attendant loss of life, causes a shock to the whole world, as in the case of the Hawaii Clipper, yet the element of safety is still with the airplane. In November five years ago the first experiments were made in long distance flying. In October, 1936, the run was opened to passengers. Since that time the trans-Pacific clippers of the Pan American Airways have flown more than two million miles in scheduled operation—almost 15,000,000 passenger miles—without an accident.

A gift of $600,000 to the Fort Worth Methodist Hospital from Dr. Charles Harris, its new director, has been announced. The endowment gift includes the Harris Clinic and Hospital, valued at $300,000; notes totaling $153,000 held against the hospital by Dr. Harris, and a $250,000 to $500,000 share in the Harris estate at his death.

Mrs. E. G. Bower, 88 years of age, who came to Texas in a covered wagon when Dallas was just a hustling frontier village, died recently in Dallas after having lived there 72 years.

Pass The Biscuits

MRS. A. T. BRIDGES

You can talk of Corrigan's fame
When he flew the Great Atlantic in his antiquated plane,
But the greatest mystery that ever swept our land
Was the victory won by W. Lee O'Daniel and his Hill Billy Band.

He didn't have the money and he didn't have the plane
But he had the Mountain Music and he got there just the same.
He had a perfect platform and a perfect motto too,
And these with Mountain Music surely got him through.

When the call first came he didn't aim to run
For he thought the Texas people were just in fun;
But when he saw his backing and how easy 'twas to win
He gobbled up those votes, W'y man, it was a sin!

We're glad he won the fight but we hate to say "good bye,"
Still we know his going means for us more pie
Yes, we're glad he won the fight and we'll miss him every hour
But he's leaving us a treasure, his Hill Billy Flour.

Yes, we'll miss him in the county and we'll miss him on the air
But we can well afford to miss him while he fills the governor's chair
For he has the brain and has the plan for business extension
That will put the idle man to work and give the aged a thirty dollar pension
And when he gets to Austin we will all be so happy
We'll smile and say with one accord, "Please pass the biscuits, Pappy."

The bill for the improvement of the Red River above Denison and to spend $54,000,000 for it recalls the voyage of the Annie P., the only steamboat to navigate Red River as far north as Denison. The old freighter came up from New Orleans on April 23, 1905, piloted by two men familiar with the snags in the river with consignments of groceries for local firms. She returned to New Orleans, where she was sold, and no boat has attempted to navigate Red River since.

WPA, with nearly 3,000,000 on its rolls, is spending at the rate of $5,737,000 a day for relief wages. The Rural Electrification Administration has made allotments totaling $21,000,000. The Farm Security Administration, with $175,000,000 at its disposal, is increasing its loans and grants and its aid to marginal farmers. Loans by the RFC, many of them to business, totaled $536,000,000 on August second. PWA has allocated $3,000,000 for Federal construction and $479,138,000 for non-Federal projects, and nineteen of the latter are already under way. The Housing Administration expects by Labor Day to have earmarked for local housing authorities, and believes that its funds will be flowing for labor and materials in the Fall.

Thursday August 25 JUST AN OLD COLORED WASHWOMAN (editorial)

Some white friend paid an old Negro washwoman friend a tribute the other day when she died and the Sulphur Springs News-Telegram gave it a prominent position on its editorial page. It is a beautiful tribute because it is deserved. There have been thousands such faithful souls among the older generations of the Southland. Here is the tribute:

“Yes, just a washer woman but a true philosopher from many points of view. Uneducated, she knew not a letter of the alphabet but always made her mark (X) through life when necessary. She left it in the homes of her employers on the lives of their children, having been chief cook in many prominent families for long periods of time where she dropped her trite sayings. She knew nothing of the fancy cooking of today, but she could bake an apple pie that would please the palate of any epicure. She often quoted scripture as heard from the pastor in the pulpit. Her memory was wonderful. She had many perverted ideas of the hereafter and its possibilities, always adding, ‘Ah, well, it matters not as some of these days I will know what Heaven is like, for I am going there.’

“During the thirty-five years that she came into my home for the weekly work, she dropped many gems of crude wisdom at my fireside, leaving much scope for thought after she was gone, which, after being sifted out, left an undercurrent of honesty, truthfulness and uprightness.

We will miss her from that accustomed seat on the porch waving a welcome hand to each passing acquaintance. A friend remarked since she passed away: ‘I wish they would move that chair from the porch; it saddens me as I pass by; tears come into my eyes, for I can’t see Aunt Jane.’

“Rest in peace, old friend, your battles are over. God was good to you in life, allowing you good health and ever granting your wish as to the manner of going away.

“In kind remembrance of an old friend, M. W.”

After Sixty Years, Ex-Rangers Meet and Talk of Bass Gang

By Gay Thier

Dave Burns was sitting at the hearth in the living room of his modest home. He was gazing at the flickering flames, while thoughts about events of prior years passed through his mind; incidents of the days when he was a young lad, in his teens, working on an open cattle range, and later, when he was a member of the Texas Rangers, serving under Captain McNally, brought memories which he enjoyed recalling to his mind.

The door bell rang, breaking Burns’ train of thought. “I wonder whom this intruder might be? Some canvasser I reckon,” he muttered as he slowly left his seat and walked to the door.

Burns opened the door and saw standing at the threshold an elderly man, who was well above six feet tall, broad shouldered, standing erect and wearing a friendly smile.

“I am looking for a man named Dave Burns,” the caller declared, while looking steadily at Mr. Burns.

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

"Dave Burns is what folks call me. What can I do for you, stranger?" Burns inquired with a puzzled expression.

"Yep, I'll swear 'tis," replied the stranger. "You all look about the same, just a wee bit aged, Burns, it's a spell of 60 years since we lamped each other."

"You got me bested pardner," Burns confessed with a perplexed look. "I can't place you all; still you all's map has a familiar look. Come in, have a seat, and rest a spell while I get my bearings," Burns invited as he stepped aside clearing the entrance.

The two men entered the room and seated themselves in front of the fireplace. Burns was looking at his caller steadily, trying to recall where and when they had met previously.

"Yes sir, stranger, you all's face is mighty familiar," Burns said after they were seated and while rolling a cigarette. "But, for the life of me, I can't recall where I met up with you," he continued. "You got me straight though. How come?"

"It's this way, I sort-a have it over you Burns. You see, I calculated on meeting up with you at this place, because I got the low down on you from the city directory. That's how come me to call. And you Burns, you all ain't been expecting Jack Read to drop in for a chat."

"Jack Read? I'll be swan! Sure as I am alive, that's who you be," was Burns surprised reply. "No, I wasn't calculating on you calling. Yes, we served together in the Rangers under Captain McNally, back in the 70s. Now it all comes back to me. Well, well, how be you Jack?"

"Fit as a fiddle. How be you, Dave? I see you all are still kicking around," Reed asked.

"Well, I am the same as you. I have been fit as a fiddle all through the years. We both have stayed around beyond our time; sort-a-living on borrowed days. Gosh for mighty Jack, it sure does my innards good to meet up with one of the old timers. Let's see, you finished your term and quit the Rangers shortly before we had that little fracas at Round Rock with Sam Bass, the Southwest's bad man."

"Yes, I reckon it was around a month before," Read replied. "Yep, I missed that little piece of fun. I was running the matter through my conk the other day, while I was jiggling through Denton county. I jiggled over to the place where Sam's ranch was, land which grazed some of the best hoss flesh in the state of Texas; as you recollect, no doubt. The old corral has its marks still showing, after all these years."

"Well, I'll be swan, you don't say," Burns interrupted.

"Yes, old timer, you can still see the marks of the hidden pasture—and a good name for the ranch Sam had—there. While looking over the place, I got to thinking about the bum tips we received on the doings of the Bass gang, for several months, which caused us to chase here and there.

"Dave, after we had dragged over the country for 15 or 20 days, and most of the nights too, doing our sleeping on the ground, using our saddles for pillows, and cooking our beans and beef over a camp fire, while looking for some rustling outfit, robber or killer, we would be tuckered out for rest and sleep. Then it seemed, at such time we would get a tip about Bass and would have to start riding again."

"It seemed to be that way," Burns agreed. He continued, "I reckon I can recall where he had us dragging to. Let's see, the first tip caused us to drag over to San Antonio, and while we were there all set for Sam, the bank at Eden was robbed. Ain't that correct Jack?" Burns queried.

"You have 'er straight, Dave, and the next tip sent us to Brownwood. While we were there the bank at Coleman got the works. Next we were sent to Waco, and while watching there, the bank at Terrell received the honor of Sam's visit. We were getting crossed up for sure."

"That's exactly how she went. Jack, you quit right after the Waco fracas, didn't you?" Burns questioned.

"Yes, that's when I took out." Continued Burns, "Well, the very next tip sent us to Round Rock. It doesn't seem so long since, but 'twas 61 years ago, in 1878, to be exact. My cousin, Jim Burns, joined up with the Bass gang just before they robbed the Terrell bank, and Jim was killed at Round Rock. I watched him when he fell."

"Dave, I never got the straight of the Round Rock affair from a buckaroo who took part in it; suppose you give it to me."

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

"My nose tells me that the old lady is fixing some chuck," Burns informed. "While she is filling the feed bags, I'll give 'er to you as I saw it, but you must agree to stay and put on the nose bag with us," Burns invited.

"Dave, that sounds like a good proposition so start your rattling."

"Well, here she goes. We were at Austin when the Company got riding orders to be at Round Rock the next day, July 19, and watch for Sam's gang. I sez to myself, another bum tip. Sam is going to bust a bank at some other place tonight(?). It was around mid-night when we received orders. We started riding shortly after getting the news, and lit in round Rock a little before the sun came up.

"McNally planted me at the Northeast corner of the square, next to a saloon, and the rest of the boys were planted at different places in the town. Orders were issued to all of us to not shoot until further orders, but watch for Sam's crowd and report. McNally was calculating on corralling the whole gang in the act of busting the bank if he could."

"The sun was just pepping over the horizon, when I spied three mounted men riding into town, coming from the south. When they reached the square, I recognized Bass and my cousin Jim. The other feller, I didn't know, but learned later he was Bill Jackson."

"Dave, did you know Sam, personally?" Read inquired.

"Yes, Jack, I met up with him at Camp Supply, up Kansas way, several years before when he was just starting out on his career. I was on a cattle drive with Joel Collins. Joel didn't return to his ranch in Erath county with us boys, but joined up with Sam's crowd at the time. Later, he and the outfit called at the ranch several times; each call was made to change mounts for fresh hosses. While at the ranch, Joel and Sam argued with me to join up with 'em. They said 'twas easy money. I told 'em I rather make my money the hard way and I am mighty glad I did. Joel was killed shortly afterwards during a U. P. train robbery.

"So, the moment the men arrived at the square I recognized Sam, and, of course, Jim Burns, my cousin. They knew me, too, the moment they laid their lamps on me. The three men tied their mounts at the square, and then walked towards the saloon where I was planted. When they got within chinnin' distance of me,

"How be you, Dave?"

"Tip-top,' sez I. 'You all know what I am, and what I am doing here I reckon?' I asked.

"Sure do, Dave,' Sam sez. 'Come in and have a snort with us.'

"Can't do 'er, boys,' sez I. 'It's against the Rangers' rules. What are you fellows doing here?'

"Just jiggling through for a little airing,' Burns tells me.

"You fellows better duck, because there are 22 of we Rangers here,' I told 'em, just to see what their comeback would be.

"What I said didn't seem to worry 'em. I reckon they thought I was shooting hot air, because the three of 'em turned, started towards the entrance of the saloon, and Sam, looking back with a smile, sez: 'Sorry old pardner that your rules do not allow you to have a snort with an old friend.'

"The men sauntered into the joint, and I began to peel my eye for the Captain, but could not lamp him. The men had not been in the saloon a minute when a deputy sheriff came up to me and asked,

"Who were all them fellows carrying artillery, just now talking to you?"

"Sam Bass and two of his pals,' I answered.

"Let's go in and get 'em," he proposed.

"No,' I sez, 'my orders are to stay here and watch their movement until further orders.'

"Well, I am going in,' sez he.

"My advice is to let the Captain handle the situation,' I suggested, but he went in.

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

"I knew that Sam and Jim, my cousin, had plenty of innards, and either of 'em could shoot the eye out of a gnat at firing distance. I feared the deputy would mess up things before we were set. I kept my eye peeled for the captain, but he was nowhere in sight.

The deputy was in the joint just a short spell when I heard a shot, which was followed by the thud sound of a body hitting the floor. I knew then that hell had popped open. I cursed orders and prayed for a sight of the captain, so I could get into action.

"I looked to the west and saw the Captain a-coming as a streak of sky-fire, carrying his hat in his hand and heading for the artillery music coming out of the saloon.

"Well, sir, the Captain passed me without saying a word or looking at me, and rushed into the joint so suddenly I didn't have a chance to rattle a word. I could tell by the Captain's looks he was hot under the collar. He calculated on letting orders go to the devil, but I didn't get a chance to move from my tracks for a spell.

"Just as the Captain entered the saloon, the shooting stopped suddenly. Pronto, I saw Jackson pop out of the joint with his gun leveled. He had me covered and following him was Sam and cousin Jim, backing out with their guns leveled, holding everybody in the joint under gun-cover. Holding this position, they backed their way to where their hosses were tied. When the men reached their animals, they turned to mount, and then the men in the joint rushed out shooting.

John Weir fired the first shot which hit Sam in the back, but Sam continued to mount his hoss, being assisted by Jim Burns. When Sam was seated in his saddle Burns started for his mount; but instead of crawling under Sam's hoss to reach his, Burns went around to the rear of Sam's animal and exposed himself. Burns was hit and fell dead between the two hosses. At this instance, Jackson, who had mounted, hooked his hand into Sam's arm, and the two men rode away; hitting the road as fast as those hosses could run, and I mean to tell you those critters could run.

"Us Rangers were soon mounted and together, trailing the two men, followed by citizens. Some on hoss back; some on mules; some riding in wagons or buggies. All were riding at the speed of longhorns stampeding for a water hole.

"We had ridden about two miles when I espied Sam's hoss off from the road a piece. I sed to McNally, 'There is Sam's hoss off yonder; I'll ride over and take a peep.' I rode over to the hoss, and there lay Sam under a blackjack tree. He had his conk cover over his face. I raised the lid, and I did he turned his head slightly. He looked at me a moment and sez:

"It's you, Dave, ain't it?"

"Yes, Sam, it's me,' I sez.

"Well, Dave, they can't do much more to me. I am sure branded for the eternal range and will be there shortly,' he told me with great effort.

"I can't undo what has been done,' sez I to him. 'But I'll do all I can for you. Where is your pal?" I asked.

"Don't worry about Jackson, because you can't catch him,' Sam sez. 'He has too much of a hoss for you all. It's one of mine. I made him light out, because he couldn't do me any good,' he added.

"We took him back to town and placed him in a room over a drug store, and there he died the next morning.

"I watched the doctor dress Sam's wounds, and we counted 28 bullet marks in his body; all from his waist up to the top of his head.

"Before Sam died, the doctor tried to get him to talk who and where his pals were, but Sam sorter smiled and sez, 'My mouth is tight as a clam's'; and it was. Not a word did he utter about any of his gang. He gave the $500 which he had in his pocket to the widow of the dead deputy, whose body made the thud sound following the first shot. Sam sez, 'I'll not have any use for 'er,' meaning the money, 'where I am going.'

"If Burns can stop rattling his gab, you two can come to dinner,' came the voice of Mrs. Burns, from the dining room.

Thursday September 1 W. H. Batis Passes Away At Handley

Thursday September 1 RIFLE BALLS By E. G. Senter

The French government has been licensed to buy $5,003,000 worth of military airplanes from United States manufacturers. This was the largest single license granted by the munitions board since it was set up under the neutrality act.

It is probably conservative to estimate that in the United States we shall spend, commencing in the next fiscal year, nearly $1,500,000,000 annually on arms. Our total expenditures may reach the tremendous sum of five billions between now and July 1, 1942. For the next fiscal year our expenses will approximate $8.77 for each inhabitant.

Four barges and a power boat in the unit, with Captain Julius Keg as captain, are now coming up the Trinity river in an effort to prove the stream's navigability. It will make the trip by way of the Mississippi River, the intracoastal canal and the Trinity River.

Thursday September 8 7-Year Resident of Masonic Home Dies

Mrs. W. R. Tuttle, resident of the Masonic Home for the past seven years died Saturday after a short illness. Funeral services were conducted in the Home Chapel with Rev. Wm. H. Cole officiating. Burial was in Keystone Cemetery with the Moore Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Thursday September 8 Mrs. J. S. Bradshaw Passed Away Sunday

Mrs. J. S. Bradshaw, who would have been 77 years of age the 26th day of this month, passed away Sunday morning at her home after a long illness. Rev. McVey conducted the funeral services which were held at the Methodist Church at 2:30. She was buried in Aurora, in Wise county.

Mrs. Bradshaw was born in Bowling Green, Ky., came to Texas in 1872 and settled in Wise county. She married J. S. Bradshaw in 1883. To this union there were born nine children, the first child, Bertie, died at the age of four.

A German novel is a book in which two people want each other in the first chapter, but do not get each other until the last chapter.

A French novel is a book in which two people get each other in the first chapter, and from then on to the last chapter don't want each other any more.

A Russian novel, however, is one in which two people neither want each other nor get each other, and about this, 450 profoundly melancholy pages are written.

Early Days On Ash Creek Is History of Azle and Springtown

By "Old Timer"

"Listen to the screeching owls." said my sister to me, one early part of a night, while we were sitting up beyond our bed time. We were waiting for our mother to return, who was away at neighbor Bidwell's. She had gone there to assist Mrs. Bidwell to nurse a sick child. Father was away serving the Confederate Army, so we children were alone. I was then nine years old and sister was one year older than I.

When sister directed my attention to what she termed screeching owls, I replied:

"It sounds like owls, but I'm sure it's not."

"It's Indians, I bet," she suggested. "Let's hide," and we did.

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

From the time we were old enough to understand the meaning of words, mother had dined in our ears the necessity of evading Indians. She had arranged two places for us to hide. One in a cabin's loft, at which place we were to go in the event our cabin was surrounded suddenly; one in a hole in a large rock, located in a brush patch near the cabin, to which place we went when the Indian warning came in time for us to reach the hole.

On this particular night, after we decided it might be Indians making the screeching noise, we blew out the candle and crawled hastily to the hole under the rock. We were not hid long when Indians, mounted on ponies, rode up to the house. They dismounted and scrutinized the place cautiously. Then they went to the corral. We had two mules and two valuable saddle horses in the pen, which were our important means of transportation those days. The Indians took the two horses, some meat which hung in the smokehouse and rode away.

Our home was located in the Ash Creek settlement at what is now Azle, Texas. The settlement was adjacent to the creek. Here the settlers each cultivated a small tract of land, raising a few vegetables, some grain and cotton. Also, they raised cattle of the longhorn breed, which were branded and let graze at their will in the creek bottom and adjacent territory. The cotton and cattle were our means of securing what little cash we needed.

We had very little need for money, because our livelihood came from the land and that which nature provided in abundance in the form of edible wild fowl and beast. Also, we had berries, fruit and honey, and various wild vegetables.

By hand, we picked seed from cotton, carded and spun it into threads. Also, the wool from the few sheep we raised, we carded and spun into yarn, and from these materials we wore cloth and it into clothes. Yes, and dyed the cloth various colors with dyes we made from bark and vegetation of different kinds.

We lived in a one room log cabin as did all other settlers, except a few who possessed a two or three room structure.

Outside of the Indian menace, the settlers lived a secured life, and my family was fortunate in not receiving any physical harm from Indians. Only the loss of horses and goods were our damage. But, others in the vicinity were not so fortunate.

The entire Davis family were either kidnapped or killed, and none of them ever heard of thereafter. They lived at Walnut Creek. The Hamelton family, who also lived at Walnut Creek, met the same fate as did the Davis family. The Indians killed Mr. and Mrs. Hamelton and carried off two children which were at home.

One of the Hameltons' children was sick with ague. This fact the Indians discovered after departing with the children. When they discovered the child's condition, they rolled it in a blanket, and laid it at the side of the trail in a clump of brush. They rode on a short distance and then heard the child crying. They then rode back and killed the infant.

A year later, a Hamelton boy, who was away from home at the time of the raid, located his sister. He traded for her, paying the Indians, with whom she living, cash and goods. He then learned of the fate his other sister met at the Indians' hands.

After the Civil War ceased, a village developed at the vicinity of Ash Creek and was named Azle. The village received its start when Dr. Stewart located in the community. He administered to the sick and operated a small farm. Dr. Stewart died during the early 1900's. Following Dr. Stewart's arrival, a man named Moore came and opened a store. He operated his business in a one room log cabin. After conducting his store for a few years, Moore, sold his business to Joe Fowler who enlarged the business. Finally a blacksmith shop was started and a postoffice was located at Azle; and the village has continued to this day.

During the years of 1866-67, the railroads had extended West into Kansas, and cattle drives to railroads began. This created prosperity for the cattlemen. I, as almost all young men of this State did those days, made my livelihood working as a cowhand. The territory around Azle and Springtown, as about all of Texas, was then a vast cattle range, except for a few scattered settlements along the bottom lands of the rivers and creeks.

By this time the Indian menace had about ceased in our section, but as a cowhand I still had a menace to face. This was the cattle rustlers who appeared with the cattle prosperity. I shall relate some of my experiences with cattle rustlers. The most trying affair I encountered was the catching, holding the trial and execution, by a vigilante's court, of the three Millet women, or Hill as called by some. This took place near Springtown, and the women were buried in the cemetery at Springtown. The Jacksboro Highway now passes this cemetery.

Early Days On Ash Creek Is History of Azle and Springtown

BY "OLD TIMER" (Continued from Last Week)

It was just before sunset, after riding all day watching for the Millet woman, I looked through my spy glass and espied three persons driving about 30 head of cattle. My partner and I had spent three days trying to catch those Millet women driving rustled cattle, so that we would have positive evidence against them.

Word had been passed around two weeks before, that these known rustlers were in the Ash Creek section. We, in the section, had decided that the ranchers had been lenient with these women long enough. They had carried on their rustling in various sections and had not been stopped, because they were women. The men did not feel like "Making good citizens" out of them. These women realized this fact and took advantage of it.

On the Reynold's and Sansom's ranches and others, the cowhands saw critter tracks which showed they were being driven off the range. Being that the Millet outfit were seen in the Ash Creek section, the steal was attributed to them. Therefore, a number of us set out to catch them in the act.

When my partner and I espied this bunch of cattle being driven towards the Trinity River, we followed the outfit. We stayed back so as to not create suspicion.

Just before dark the crew halted. We dismounted, leaving our horses and walked cautiously toward the crew. Using our spy glass, we were soon close enough to see who the people were. It was the Millet outfit. They were at the place where they concentrated rustled cattle before driving the animals to their market.

We notified other members of the Vigilante Committee and by mid-night, the committee was ready for action. We went quietly and surrounded the outfit. We had them covered with our six-guns before they were aware of our presence. We took the women and a man to the creek bottom near Springtown.

The judge of the committee's court called the court to order. The evidence against the prisoners was presented, and it saw beyond contradiction. At the outfit's camp were critters containing the brand of several different ranchers.

The women begged to be let go and promised to leave the country. Also, promised to stop rustling. This appeal had no effect on the committee, because it was known the women had made such promises before. They had only gone to some other range section and continued their stealing. Therefore, the vote was in favor of a "rope party," except for the man who was a hired hand and ignorant. In his case banishment was the sentence.

We prepared the women for their part in the "rope party," and the while they used all their feminine skill pleading to be spared the ignominy of being hanged by a crowd, but instead to be turned over to the authorities. With tears, they pleaded until they were convinced their efforts would not bring results, and then turned their wrath on the members of the committee.

Each of them were placed on a horse, a noose fastened around their necks and the rope looped over a limb. When everything was in readiness, the committee's judge prayed for their souls.

Then the horses were driven away, leaving the women to drop to the end of the ropes, stopping with a jerk.

The bodies squirmed and twisted with convulsive movements for a few seconds and then quivered. This action lasted a few seconds, came to a stop slowly and finally hanged limp. In this position the bodies were left.

As a rule such bodies were found a day or so following the ceremony, but in this case they were not. Some one forgot to accidently find the bodies and report their find to the authorities.

These bodies hanged for many days. When they were reported and Ranger Mont Roe went to get the bodies for burial, decomposition had caused the bodies to separate from their heads, leaving the heads in the nooses and the bodies laying on the ground.

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

Mont Roe, with assistance, buried the bodies in the cemetery at Springtown. The graves were dug under a tree, and to its limb the three ropes were tied, as a symbol of the grave's contents.

And thus, three women contributed to a necessary means born of the times, which had to be employed for protection against stealing cattle.

Thursday September 22 W. C. Wiley Commits Suicide Saturday Night

Sally Wiley, Assistant Fire Chief shot and killed himself late Saturday evening in the police station at the City Hall. There were no eye witnesses. Linton Lovell the last person to see him alive said he met Mr. Wiley as he went down the steps of the city hall and he asked him where Cranford Dalby was. Lovell told him he had gone down the street. Lovell passed on down the steps and a second later heard a shot and rushed back to the office and found Mr. Wiley lying on the floor. He was rushed to Bobo's Hospital where he was found to be fatally injured. The shot was fired by the pistol belonging to Constable Tom Lee who had left it on his desk when he went home to dinner. Justice W. H. Powers held the inquest Sunday morning and rendered a verdict of suicide.

Thursday September 22 Funeral Services Held For W. C. (Sally) Wiley

Again Arlington has been called upon to give up one of its young men, a man who was loved by all his associates and friends, W. C. Wiley, better known to his friends as Sally Wiley. Mr. Wiley, through some cause unknown to his family or his friends, killed himself in the police station late Saturday evening. When the word was passed around the town was stunned and it has not recovered yet. Sally was kind and courteous to all and always had a happy greeting for his friends when they went to the city hall or he met them on the street.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday evening at the Christian Church with Rev. Keith, pastor, assisted by Reverends S. M. Bennett, K. T. Melugin and Patrick Henry, Jr., officiating. Mrs. Hudson Tucker sang. Pallbearers were Benton Collins, Ott Cribbs, Champ Barnes, Oliver Burch, Linton Lovell and James Elder. Honorary pallbearers were the City Commission and Will G. Hiatt. Burial was in Parkdale Cemetery with the Moore Funeral Home in charge. The funeral cortage was led by nine mounted highway patrolmen.

Survivors are his wife and one son, William Sydney, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Wiley, one sister, Miss Loretta Wiley all of Arlington and one brother in Wichita Falls.

Mr. Wiley was born in Sweetwater and came with his parents to Arlington 27 years ago. He was 28 years old. For the past 8 years he has been with the fire department and at the time of his death was Assistant Chief. The passing of Sally Wiley left a void in the hearts of his friends. He was generous, loyal and kindly. He had lived in Arlington all his life and as he went about his daily duties he met many people and by his lovable qualities made them all his friends. The entire town extends sympathy to his wife and son and his mother, father and family in their sorrow.

Thursday September 22 CARD OF THANKS

With hearts full of love and appreciation we wish to express our thanks to our many friends, the City Council, the Police Department, the Highway Patrol and business men of Arlington for their help and sympathy during our recent bereavement. Also for the beautiful flowers.

Mrs. C. W. Wiley and son.

Mrs. and Mrs. S. A. Wiley and Loretta.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Wiley and family.

Thursday September 22

More than 2,000,000 men were engaged in the Union Army during the Civil War. Less than 3,000 of these boys in blue now survive. About a hundred of these survivors, ranging in age from 84 to 103 years, gathered in Des Moines, Iowa, for the seventy-second annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Union veterans' organization founded in 1866. In its peak year, 1890, the G. A. R. had a membership of 409,487.

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

More than 600 projects, to safeguard public health in seven southwestern states are being built with the assistance of PWA. There are 431 projects for waterworks construction in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico. The hospital projects range in size from 25-bed institutions in semi-rural areas to a $13,000,000 charity hospital in New Orleans.

The average person in the United States eats $15.33 worth of meat a year. The 1,100 separate meat-packing plants throughout the Nation have a total annual production of almost $2,000,000,000.

Thursday September 29 Robert F. Jenkins Dies In Highway Accident

Robert F. Jenkins, brother of O. S. Jenkins of Weatherford, was killed in a highway accident near Shreveport, La., last Friday night about 10 o'clock.

The manner in which Mr. Jenkins was killed is unknown at the time of this writing. He telephoned his wife about 9:30 that due to a flat on his car he would be late getting home. A few minutes later came the news of his sudden death. It is believed that he was struck by a passing vehicle while repairing the tire.

Surviving are his wife and three children, five brothers and three sisters.

Mr. O. S. Jenkins and his daughter, Eleanor, left Friday night to attend funeral and burial services which were held in Shreveport Sunday afternoon.

Thursday September 29 RIFLE BALLS By E. G. Senter

The eighty-first anniversary of the establishment in Texas of Sanger Brothers was celebrated last week by its 1,000 employees. A history of this concern is a part of the history of Texas. It was started by three brothers, Alex, Isaac and Phillip, on the Texas Central, at Bryan, and as that road was built it established branches upon it until the road reached Dallas. It broadened out until its business covered every branch of a mercantile concern. It is, perhaps, the oldest concern of its kind in the South.

O. A. Gilliam, who is 92 years old and who guarded Traveller, the favorite horse of General Lee during the war, is dead, at Dallas. He ran off and joined the Confederate army when he was fifteen years of age. At the recent Gettysburg reunion he danced with the girls and cut a pigeon wing for the news reels.

Thursday September 29 (The following is a fragment of a two-part article on Fort Worth)

..... The business houses of the town were clustered around the court house square. The stockade and some of the buildings of the prior Army Post, Fort Worth, were still standing, on the land now used as the court house yard. The school I attended was in one of the Fort's buildings, at about where the Criminal Court Building now stands. At the East end of the present Court House, a log structure stood and was the first county building. I assisted in tearing down this log building to clear the land for a new Court House, which was built and burned in 1878.

When we came to Fort Worth, it was a village and a live one. Cowboys, buffalo hunters and Indians were conspicuous. At what is now Taylor street was an Indian trail. This trail ran north to what we then called Possum Ridge, the range of hills in North Fort Worth.

Possum Ridge was covered with teepees. However, about this time the Indians had started to depart from the ridge, and white settlers began to move there. The vicinity became known as the White Settlement. A part of the Indian trail became known as the White Settlement Road, and we still call this, now highway, the White Settlement Road.

Among the first settlers at Possum Ridge were the Alford, Grant, and Farmer families. Some of the decendants of the original Farmer families are still living in the vicinity.

About two years after I arrived in Fort Worth, agitation became great for a railroad to enter the town, and it was quite definitely settled this would take place. Then buffalo hides were hauled in by the hundred loads, and stacked waiting for the railroad's arrival. The hides were stored on the tract of land where the Brown Block is now located, at Lancaster and Main streets. At this time railroad was extended into the town, in 1876,

Memories of "Old Timer"; Early Days in Fort Worth

By Gay Thier

The friends of Fort Worth in the legislature had prevented adjournment of the body on its scheduled date. They used parliamentary tricks and waged a gallant, but persistent battle holding back defeat of the land grant so essential to Fort Worth's success; while the construction crew, with unanticipated speed, was performing the work of completing the railroad into Fort Worth. The crew and the friends in the legislature won the contest on July 19, 1876. Penned emotions from fearing defeat and emotions of success were released by the citizens in a celebration held July 19th, the day the first train entered Fort Worth.

People began to assemble early in the morning, coming from miles around. Some came in wagons pulled by mules, horses or oxen. Many came on horseback. They, with the citizens of Fort Worth, gathered around the depot, which was located East of Main and South (now) Lancaster avenue. Here they waited for the train to arrive. Some had never seen a train. Those that had seen a train were busy attempting to explain what a train looked like, and its operation to those who had not seen one. So, thus the crowd patiently waited for the great event to take place—the arrival of a train.

Finally, the people were rewarded for their patience. Smoke appeared at a distance in the East, and simultaneously the air was rent with the yell, "here she comes," repeated many times. A number of men busied themselves shunting people off the track with the command, "clear the track, here she comes." The train came in sight—a small engine pulling several flat-cars and a coach. The engine's bell began to ring and the whistle tooted constantly, while the crowd split the air with yells of satisfaction.

The train came slowly, swaying from side to side, up and down as it traveled cautiously over the hastily laid, crude tracks. As the train pulled up to the depot, men had a difficult time keeping people from crowding too close to the track, until the engine started suddenly to pop off steam. This caused a stampede away from the train.

I was standing at the side of Prest Farmer and his wife the moment when the engine began to pop off steam. Farmer grabbed his wife by the arm and led her away on a run, saying, "hell! Maria! Maranda—Maranda was his wife's name—this darn contraption is going to blow up, sure as the devil has a tail." Farmer was not the only one who ran. However, after a couple of minutes the people realized nothing serious was going to happen, and they all surged back to feast their eyes on the engine. After the train came to a stop, the whistle was kept blowing and the bell ringing. Captain B. B. Paddock crawled into the cab of the engine and threw wood into the fire-box to keep up steam for the whistle, which was tied down, keeping its blast renting the air constantly.

The celebration continued all day and far into the night. Everyone prophesied a great future for Fort Worth. Captain Paddock's prophesy was that Fort Worth would have a population of 25,000 in years to come. Time has proven he had the correct idea, but was a little short on his estimation.

Immediately after the railroad arrived, Fort Worth became the important cattle town of the Southwest, and also, the leading amusement center. Hundreds of cowboys, ranchers and buffalo hunters made Fort Worth their mecca for business and pleasure.

During those days I witnessed some amusing incidents and some tragic affairs. I shall relate one of the amusing incidents next week.

Some Gentlemen Still Alive

Last week, on returning to his car in Fort Worth, Arthur T. Bridges found a slip on his windshield which he took off with a shivery feeling sure the police had him for a dollar's worth of over parking. However, on reading it, he found this message:

"E. O. Taylor, phone 6-2522. I broke your headlights. I will pay for them."

Mr. Bridges looked up his street number and sent him the following letter:

Arlington, Texas - November 14, 1938

Mr. E. O. Taylor
2613 Rosen St.
Fort Worth

The ARLINGTON CITIZEN, Arlington, Texas. 1938

My Dear Mr. Taylor:

I appreciate the note you left me when you broke my headlights. However you do not owe me anything. I had them replaced at a Used Parts Store for a mere trifle. It's worth a great deal more than this small cost merely to run into—or even to 'be run into' by—an unmistakable gentleman of the first class occasionally. Life means just a little more, I feel just a little better, to know that such a fellow lives, near by.

Good luck and good wishes to you and also to your headlight breaking.

Very truly yours – ARTHUR T. BRIDGES

Thursday November 17 Jury Reaches Verdict In R. C. Bell's Trial

RIFLE BALLS

By E. G. Senter

Capt. Horace Harvey, aged 78, life-long proponent of inland waterways and prime mover in completion of the Intracostal Canal from New Orleans to Corpus Christi, is dead. For more than thirty years he worked for establishment of the intracostal system and saw his dream come true when the Harvey locks, which form the Louisiana terminal of waterway, were opened in 1934. Until he sold it to the United States in 1924, the Harvey Canal, last link in the system which ends at the Mississippi River, had been operated by the Harvey family for 200 years.

England has called on its vast colonial empire to support the plan of the United States Ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy, to find a refuge for German Jews. It will cost $600,000,000 to attain final solution of the German Jews' problem. It is estimated there are 600,000 Jews in Germany now subject to one of the greatest campaigns of anti-Semitism.

Mother of Elmo Jones Is Buried At Terrell

Mrs. Inez Jones, aged 69, died at her home in Terrell Sunday evening at five o'clock. She had been in ill health for about one year but for the past month her condition had been critical. Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at the residence at 2:30 with Rev. Simpson, pastor of the Terrell Methodist Church officiating. Burial was in the Terrell Cemetery.

Mrs. Jones was the mother of Elmo Jones of Arlington, who spent every moment of his spare time at his mother's bedside for the past six weeks and the last two weeks of his mother's lifetime both he and Mrs. Jones remained in Terrell.

Other survivors besides Mr. Jones are her husband, Adam Jones, three sons and three daughters.

Mrs. Jones had lived in Terrell for the past 20 years. She was born in Pulaski, Tenn., September 6, 1869. She, with her family, moved to Texas about 30 years ago and located in Aubrey, Denton county. The family resided there for about ten years and moved to Terrell. Mrs. Jones had been a member of the Methodist Church for the past 47 years and practiced her religion in her everyday life. She was a devoted mother, a loyal friend and a good neighbor. This paper and the people of Arlington extend sympathy to Mr. Jones in the loss of his mother.

W. B. Milburn Tells Of Old Times In Texas

To the Citizen:

Gentlemen: A few weeks ago, I wrote an article about a bread tray made of Buckeye. I found some folks who had seen one of this kind, but not made of Buckeye.

I have decided to drop back a few years, and ask if there are any people here who remember when the vehicle called a Buggy first made its appearance in the locality where they were reared.

I remember when there were perhaps 3 or 4 Buggies in the entire community where I was born. It was only the wealthy who could afford a buggy. And some people said they did not know how to ride in them and would set them aside after buying themselves a nice buggy.

A great many people then had Negroes, and always had a servant boy who went with them wherever they went, and the buggy was equipped with a seat out side at the rear of the buggy for the boy. He would ride backward all the time and those days there were very few roads and when anyone went anywhere, they had to go through fences and sometimes through a neighbor's yard, and most of the fences were made of fence rails about 10 feet long. And the boy riding on this seat mentioned, knew when a fence was to be let down and he jumped down and ran ahead and let the fence down so as to let the buggy pass through. The boss or mistress, as the case might be, drove through but never stopped so the Negro had to put up the fence and run and catch up with the buggy and jump up on his seat. Sometimes it was draw bars instead of a fence and once in a great while some prosperous farmer would have a gate instead of the fence or draw bars, but this was a rare occasion.

I believe I would know the first kerosene lamp ever come to the town where I was born. It created as much curiosity as did the airplane when it came. The blacksmiths made the lamps and they were used extensively, with grease as fuel and a wick made of twisted rag strings. Sometime a sycamore ball would float in the grease and make a nice light. Later candles were made. They were called dipped candles. They were made by melting grease and perhaps some beeswax so as to make them last longer. Next, a few strings were tied to a stick and a weight on each string so as to hold them straight and on cold days, a fire was built out in the yard and the grease and beeswax was melted. Then the strings were dipped into the melted solution and then held up to get cold and this was repeated until the candles were about the size of a man's finger. They were then ready for use. One family of people sold whiskey, and before they quit using the grease lamp, someone called for some whiskey in the night and the old lady said, "Old man, I haven't any light, so you will have to wait until I twist a week." Meaning the rag string mentioned above.

Now, if some of you can antedate this, I will try again, I have some more a little further back.

Funeral Services For Joe Hiett Were Held Tuesday Morning

Funeral services for Joe F. Hiett, 63, were held Tuesday morning at 10:00 o'clock at Rehobeth Church about seven miles south of Arlington. Mr. Hiett died Monday morning at 2:00 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank Klihrand, 322? Childress Street, Fort Worth. He had been ill for about ten months.

The services were conducted by Rev. Howard Walton assisted by Rev. Kermit Melugin, pastor of the Arlington Baptist Church. Rowland Leath of Fort Worth sang as a solo, "Win Them One By One." He visited Mr. Hiett Friday night and he sang this song for him. It was one of his favorites and expressed the noble qualities of the deceased, who spent his life doing for others.

Burial was in Rehobeth Cemetery with the Hugh Moore Funeral Home in charge. Pallbearers were Will Leath, Spurge Bussey, Charles Coleman, Joe Kelley, Will Moore and Joe Schooler.

Survivors are his widow, Mrs. Nora Hiett; a son, O. H. Hiett, Fort Worth; two daughters, Mrs. Frank Klihrand and Mrs. E. L. McCalester, Fort Worth; three grandchildren; five brothers, Will G. Hiett, Arlington; Bob Hiett, Vinson, Oklahoma; O. A. Hiett, Dallas; Charles Hiett, Los Angeles, California; and Henry Hiett, Breckenridge; one sister, Mrs. Ben Thomas, Arlington.

Mr. Hiett was born at Longview, Texas, November 5th, 1875 and with his parents moved to Tarrant County about 50 years ago and located near Rehoba. He was baptized into the Baptist Church about 38 years ago. About 20 years ago he moved to Wellington, Texas, where he lived until he became ill about ten months ago. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Minor Hiett deceased. During his father's last illness he came to Arlington to take care of him and no son could have been kinder or more thoughtful than Joe Hiett.

Rev. Walton said he died a triumphant death, he was ready and resigned to the will of God. A short time before he died, he said, "I am ready but there are others who are not." Joe Hiett was the most humble and kindly man I have ever known. He never thought of self, always of his loved ones, his neighbors and his friends. He exemplified the true Christian spirit in his life and even the least of his friends and acquaintances could go to him, sure of his sympathy and help. He leaves to his wife and children a heritage of love and an example of a life well lived. The influence of Joe Hiett will live long after his departure to reap the reward promised to those who love the Lord.

Mrs. Alice Burford Briggs, wife of the late Rev. Dr. R. J. Briggs and mother of George W. Briggs, a Dallas banker, is dead at Austin. She was 82 years of age at the time of her death and would have soon celebrated the fifty-eighth anniversary of her wedding.

New estimates prepared for the American Youth Commission set the number of job-hunting boys and girls between 16 and 34 years of age at nearly six million. The commission's research staff estimated that 3,800,000 of these were totally unemployed.

LaFayette Fitzhugh, aged 80, and an early-day railroad lawyer, and City Attorney of East Dallas before it was annexed to Dallas, is dead. He died in the home he built fifty years ago and on the street he named for his father. He had been a lawyer in Dallas since 1883. At one time he bought the H. & C. Railroad in a receivership sale for $10,000 for Colonel Green. He operated the road for six months as trustee. His father had been an official of the Confederate Government. Thursday December 29 Brother of Walter Leverett Passes Away

Gainesville lost one of its most prominent and highly revered citizens when W. W. (William) Leverett, 64, passed away at his home on South Denton street, about 5:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He had suffered a heart attack at his real estate office downtown, Friday afternoon and was unconscious most of the time until his death.

Funeral rites were observed at the First Presbyterian church at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. The present minister, Rev. Clyde Kennedy; two of the three former pastors of the church, Dr. R. E. Joiner, Jacksonville and Rev. Garland Shell, Temple, and the Rev. Chas. W. Estes, Presbyterian minister of Whitesboro, an intimate friend of the deceased, participated in the services. Interment was in Fairview cemetery, directed by George J. Carroll and Son.

The following served as pallbearers: Charles Sarles, H. O. McCain, Henry Frasher, Jasper Guy Estes, A. Baker and Clay Newton.

The casket, which reposed in front of the pulpit, was banked with scores of floral tokens, bespeaking in a manner the esteem in which this fine Christian character was held. Touching vocal selections were presented by Robert Joiner Jr., of Mineral Wells, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Joiner, accompanied by Mrs. Clyde Kennedy, and a quartet consisting of Mrs. Kennedy, Miss Myrtle Anna Brooks and Messrs. A. G. Pfaff and Robert Joiner, accompanied by Miss Eula McCain.

Mr. Leverett is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Leverett; a sister, Mrs. J. P. Meek, Childress, Texas; three brothers, J. D. Leverett, Fort Worth; Walter Leverett, Arlington, and Guy Leverett, Fairfield, Texas; also a number of nieces, nephews, and other relatives, most of whom were here for the funeral.

Will Leverett was among the pioneer citizens of Gainesville, having resided here some 40 years. A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Leverett, he was born in Travis county, near the city of Austin, Texas, December 14, 1874.

Mr. Leverett was honored on frequent occasions by the citizenship. He was elected to a term as judge of the city court; served several terms as a director of the Chamber of Commerce and was president of that organization in 1932. He was a past president of the Rotary club and was serving as president of the Half Century Club, an organization of Cooke county pioneers, at the time of his passing.

Religion was his principal attraction in life, however, and he had rendered inestimable service to his church, his community and his state in that endeavor.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Leverett of Arlington attended the funeral.

Harry Beeler, aged 50, former wealthy oilman and friend of the Blaylock city administration of Dallas, died at Parkland Hospital in that city of two bullet wounds which were received near his heart. He was found wounded in his room at the Southland Hotel by its employes. Beeler was once independently wealthy and supported the late Louis Blaylock when he was a candidate for mayor.

One person was fatally injured and more than fourteen were hurt, five of them seriously, in two traffic accidents which involved three automobiles and a bus near Kyle, Texas. State police reported that a station wagon and a sedan collided on the wet pavement, injuring eight persons, and immediately thereafter a Greyhound bus, loaded to its capacity of forty passengers overturned when the driver attempted to avoid hitting the wrecked cars.
