Friday August 17  MRS. CRAWLEY KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT ON WAY HOME

News of the tragic death of Mrs. Cecil Crawley of Beaumont, which came Thursday, brought grief and shock to Arlington relatives and friends. For it was only a week from that day that she had left Arlington well and happy, for home.

Death was met in an automobile accident near Kaufman, where she and the 19 year-old son of a neighbor were enroute to the funeral of the young man’s father which was to have been held in that city Thursday afternoon.

According to press reports on the accident, the car in which Mrs. Crawley and the young man were riding skidded in gravel on the side of the highway when they swerved to pass a truck, and overturned in a ditch at the side of the road. Death was almost the instant result for Mrs. Crawley. The young man who was seriously injured was taken to a hospital in Terrell.

Funeral services were held in Somerville Saturday with interment also there. This is the place of residence of her parents and a sister who survive. Cecil Crawley’s father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Crawley a brother, Jim Crawley and a sister, Mrs. Royce Christopher and her husband who are here all went to Somerville Saturday to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Crawley was only 28 years of age and was admired and loved by a great number of friends and relatives for her many good qualities of mind and charm.

The deepest sympathy is felt for her husband, parents and other relatives in the grief they experience in her death.

Friday August 17  SMELKER TELLS OF AUTO CRASH

--This clipping was taken from a Beaumont paper and gives the details of the accident which claimed the life of Mrs. Cecil Crawley, well-known former Arlington resident, and will be of interest to her many friends here.

Funeral rites for Mrs. Cecil W. Crawley, 28, fatally injured in an automobile accident, which occurred near Canton, Texas, Thursday will be held at Somerville Saturday. Interment will be in the cemetery at that place.

At the time of the accident, Mrs. Crawley and Ben Roy Smelker, Jr., were en route to Kaufman, where they were to attend the funeral services of young Smelker’s father, B. R.
Smelker, Sr., who died here Wednesday.

C. V. Smelker, of the T. V. Smelker company, and a relative of the injured youth returned here Friday night from Kaufman where he attended the funeral services of Mr.
Smelker, later visiting the injured youth in the Dallas Medical and Surgical Clinic where he is receiving treatment.

Smelker brought back the first detailed account of the accident received here. He said that Mrs. Crawley and young Smelker, driving in young Smelker’s automobile, a Plymouth sedan were traveling at a good rate of speed, when according to a garage attendant in the highway near the scene of the accident they rounded a wide curve in the road. At that particular point there had been an automobile and truck collision about three hours earlier in the day, and the wrecked cars were still at the scene of the accident.

Mr. Smelker said that according to the youth who figured in the accident, that he never realized whether Mrs. Crawley put on the brakes in an attempt to stop and view the wreck, or whether she slowed up when she saw the wreck and the brakes locked on the car, but suddenly the car left the highway, rolled over three times and landed at the foot of a steep embankment. He said that both young Smelker and Mrs. Crawley were thrown out through the top of the car, and the machine was demolished. Mrs. Crawley died a few minutes after the accident, it was said.

Friday September 7  “Dad” Morris, 98 Years Old Today Has Big Party

Friends of J. W. (Dad) Morris of Arlington, who will be 98 Friday, are planning an old-fashioned “pounding” as a birthday present to the pioneer.

Born September 7, 1833, at Possum Trot, Virginia, Morris has been in the course of his life farmer, railroad man, lumberjack, carpenter, ditch cleaner and charcoal burner.

During the civil war he fought with the Confederate forces and engaged in the battle of Shiloh. He served under Generals Albert Sidney Brown and J. B. Hood.

He remembers that his father turned loose 100 negroes when Lincoln freed the slaves.

Morris came to Texas in 1867 and settled in Penola County in East Texas. Two years later he went to Louisiana, where he worked in a saw mill. Referring to his experiences while a lumberjack, he said, “At Bueno Vista I had the great pleasure of killing six negroes.”

The negroes were discharged by the mill owner and Morris fired on them as they attempted to damage mill property.

Morris’ ambition is to live to be 110.

The modern age, he thinks is a very fast one.

“If things keep going in double gear as they are now, there is liable to be a big bust-up,” he prophesies.

“I would like to see things drop back as they were when I was 20, when we went to church in ox wagons. I once drove fifty miles to a camp meeting and stopped nine weeks.”

The country, he thinks, is going to go wet with vengeance. “The saloons will be back on every corner,” he forecasts.

If he had his way, Morris would abolish whiskey, but he likes beer claiming that he can drink a double header every hour and that no one can tell it on him.

Morris has lived in Arlington by spells for the last fifty years. He has been here continuously since 1921. He has six children living.

Judge E. C. King is organizing a party to give the old man a birthday shower. He lives by himself on an acre of land close to the Southside school, renting a small home from Hugh Moore.

Friday September 7  DALLAS WOMAN CRASH VICTIM HERE SUNDAY

Mrs. L. A. Fisher, whose home was at 3314 Cold Springs Road, Dallas, was fatally injured Sunday afternoon at the intersection of Cooper and Division streets, when the truck in which she and her family were riding collided with a steel post, which holds the Berachan Home sign at that location on the highway.

According to witnesses of the accident the truck which was headed toward Ft. Worth swerved to avoid striking an oncoming car and in so doing ran into the post. Riding in the car with Mrs. Fisher were her husband and three children. None of the other occupants of the truck were seriously injured although one of the small children sustained an injury to a leg, and the man was suffering from a dislocated shoulder.

The woman’s skull was crushed, and there were other injuries. She was brought to Dr. McKissick’s office where all possible was done for her and the others who were injured, after which she was taken in a Moore Funeral Home ambulance to a Dallas hospital where she died a short time after her arrival.

Worth Theatre Featuring Cab Calloway’s Band and Entertainers

Cab Calloway, celebrated negro band leader and his orchestra along with his New Cotton Club Show of Harlem entertainers will begin a four day appearance on the stage of the Worth Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, starting Friday, Oct. 5th.

This will mark Calloway's second appearance in Fort Worth, where he played to enthusiastic crowds during March of last year. This time he brings a brand new show with him...with everything new except the famed “hi-de-ho.”
Cab Calloway, who has become a radio, motion picture and stage sensation in the last two years with his “hot” orchestra and distinctive style of singing is indebted to Southern pickaninnies for the song trick which has made him famous.

It is called “scat singing”, supplanting the lyrics of songs with meaningless, “hi-de-ho” and “do-de-do” are best examples. First to do it were colored urchins entertaining travelers at wayside stations enroute to Southern resorts. They also originated the Charleston dance.

Calloway tried “scat singing” one night when he forgot the lyrics of a song. Now popular songs are still written around the idea. This style of shouting was incorporated in the cycle of “Minnie the Moocher” songs with which he is identified.

In the show are Nicodemus, comedian, Aida Ward, songstress, Elma Turner, dancer, and the Five Percolators.

Calloway and his orchestra will play for a four dance at Lake Worth Casino Saturday night beginning at 10:30. Admission will be $2.20 per couple. Popular prices of 25c, 40c, 65c will prevail at the theatre during this engagement.

Car Accident At Death Crossing Kills One And Injures Two Others

(CROWDED OUT LAST WEEK)

One man was killed, another injured and the wife of one of them badly bruised and shaken up as result of a three-car crash at Death Crossing just West of Arlington Monday afternoon about 6 o'clock. The man who was killed was C. C. Roberts, a salesman for a leather firm out of Houston whose home, however, was in Dallas.

Highway Patrolman Frese and Carr said that the car in which Roberts was riding was traveling toward Arlington when it collided with a truck in attempting to pass another car going West. The car then, which was directly behind the Roberts car, crashed into the wreck.
The truck was driven by H. H. Deason of Stephenville, who was in the employ of the Myrick and Roberts Poultry Co. of Fort Worth. The third car which figured in the crash was driven by Carl Osman of Gary, Ind., who in company with his wife was touring this part of the country.

Roberts was brought to Arlington and administered first aid treatment by Dr. Collins. He was then taken in a Moore Funeral Home ambulance to a Dallas hospital where he died about 8 p.m. He was suffering from fractures of the skull, right leg and right arm. The car in which he was riding was completely demolished.

Mr. and Mrs. Osman were brought to Arlington and Dr. McKissick dressed their hurts. They were sent to the Cooper Hotel for a few days rest and recuperation before resuming their trip. Their car was also badly wrecked.

Deason, driver of the truck was shaken up and bruised considerably and the front of the truck badly wrecked. Charges of negligent homicide were filed against him in the District Attorney’s office by Highway Patrolman Frese and Carr Monday night after the collision.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF LETA MAE VAUGHN

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Vaughn died at 3:40 p.m. Oct. 3, in a Ft. Worth hospital.

Leta Mae was born Sept. 11, 1924, and was therefore 10 years old.

ANOTHER DESPERADO PASSES

The trail of another notorious desperado has ended. Charles “Pretty Boy” Floyd has gone the way of Dillinger, the Barrows, and numerous other outlaws who have within recent years left a bloody path across the landscape.

Although it is inhuman to exult in murder, it is quite probable that the nation has breathed a sigh of relief at the death of Floyd. His record stamped him as a ruthless outlaw, whose deadly aim had brought death to many homes. His death probably will save countless other persons who might have in time crossed his path had he lived. The nation can hardly refrain from giving voice to “Good Work!”

We would not moralize over the death of another public enemy; but it seems to us that the high toll being taken among criminals by officers of the law is sufficient to discourage bold and bloody outlawry. Eventually the long arm of the law closes about the murdering type of criminal; and when it does—what an old embrace!

Friday November 2

The world powers are still anxiously watching Europe for any possible developments of international importance.

The present outbreak is the result of the change in government which took place when the Hapsburgs toppled from power in 1918 and internal organization of the new nation became the most important issue. Nickolas Pashitch became the leader of those who desired a powerful centralized state, and Stefar Rodtch, the “uncrowned king of Crotia,” became the advocate of a Federal system with local authority. The conflict between the two has never been settled, and its latest toll was the assassination of King Alexander.
It is gratifying to see that Hitler is tactfully remaining quiet. Any move on his part, other than one of sympathy, could easily create strained relations between the powers of Europe.

Mussolini, despite accounts of anti-Italian riots and a personal attack on an Italian official, has gone out of his way to show the Italian nation’s grief for the assassinated king. His friendly and conservative action will further the possibilities of continued peace.

Pierre Laval, who only last week replaced the heroic Barthou, has already begun work to ease the bad feeling existing between Yugoslavia and Italy.

Great Britain has tried to keep peace by instructing her envoys in Rome and Belgrade to counsel the governments to which they are assigned to observe a reciprocal attitude of moderation.

The actions of the individual powers of Europe shows that each has troubles enough of its own without creating a crisis embittering all Europe.

One of the most famous men of France died last week. Raymond Poincare was president of France during the World War. He has been a leader in French government for the past fifteen years. He gave up his great political work when his health failed in 1930. His physicians state that shock from the assassination of Alexander probably hurried his death.

Although the Federal Department of Justice has succeeded in solving almost all of the kidnapping cases in the United States, the recent outbreak of this particular type of crime shows that it has not been eliminated. The rapidity of the solution of the Stoll kidnapping shows that the Federal organization has improved its method of handling these cases. If those who are found guilty are given the maximum penalty, other criminals will hesitate to engage in this type of crime.

Upton Sinclair has created quite a disturbance in California. While Sinclair is a socialist, he is the Democratic nominee for governor of California. His E.P.I.C. program is being thoroughly discussed throughout the United States. He plans to put all the unemployed to work in idle factories or on farms. Each individual in the system would be paid in warehouse receipts entitling him to his fair share of the products of other factories conducted by the unemployed, and in general, under the scheme, the unemployed would be as rich in this world’s goods and as comfortably off as their productive ingenuity entitled them to be. Meanwhile the employed and still solvent taxpayers would at least be spared the expense of supporting or contributing to the support of nearly 3,000,000 people. His experiment if and when he is allowed to try it, will be watched by the entire nation.

The World Scene

By Polly Rumph

The situation in France and Germany has become extremely tense. November 1 France received warning from Germany that preparation for possible occupation of the Saar territory is a challenge to Germany. The rich Saar region will vote on January 13 on whether to join Germany or France or to remain under the League of Nations, and until then under no circumstances can peace and order be enforced in the Saar with military force by either of the powers concerned.

The fear of war overshadows France for they realize the strength of the German army, which, it is said, consists of more than two million men with the full backing of tanks, artillery, and aerial fleet. The strength of the German army will be greater next Spring than was that of the army with which Germany entered the World War.

The danger is that German Nazis, impatient to take over the little territory sliced from their country by the Versailles Treaty, may enter the Saar under arms. Such an attempt may be made even if the German government actively disapproves. If such an attempt is made and war breaks out between Germany and France, will the rest of the world be plunged into the conflict?

Events in the church-state conflict in Mexico have apparently passed the crisis. The Mexican newspaper, El Nacional, last week published letters in the effort to prove that Mexican Catholics were organizing against the government. The papers contended that the aim of the Catholics was to impress President Roosevelt against the cause of the people of Mexico through the aid of Catholic leaders in the United States.

Attorney General Emilio Portes Gil has been ordered by President Abelardo Rodriguez to prosecute any churchman against whom evidence might be found. The charges concerned opposition of churchmen to the government’s rationalistic educational program under its six-year reconstruction plan. At the same time the Supreme Court ruled that all privately owned buildings in which Catholic ceremonies of any kind are held should become property of the nation.

The King of Siam, Prajadhipok, has announced his intention to abdicate his throne. Until two years ago Prajadhipok, whose throne is one of the world’s oldest, was the world’s only monarch. The national assembly, however, sought to deprive him of his right to decide whether persons sentenced to death for crime should live or die. That moved him to abdicate, though he has as yet signed no documents in connection with his wish.

Though the Siamese army was divided into two factions, one favoring and the other opposing the king, the ten million subjects did not know that their ruler had threatened to quit. The monarch let it be known he would withdraw his intention if his government abandons the measure limiting his powers. Meanwhile, the status of the government of Siam is undecided and it is feared that the reaction to King Prajadhipok’s desire to give up the throne will result in revolution.

KILLED IN CAR ACCIDENT

(picture of young lady)

Miss Grace Beauchamp of Arlington and student at N.T.A.C. last year who was killed in an automobile crash last Thursday night near Denton.

News of the death of Miss Grace Beauchamp which came to Arlington by telephone Thursday evening shocked and grieved the entire populace of the city. Miss Beauchamp, who was attending C. I. A. in Denton, was killed instantly near that city as a result of a car wreck.

There were, according to the best available information, two other young ladies, also students of the college, and three young men in the car at the time of the wreck. The party had been to a show in Denton and the girls received permission from the teacher in charge of their dormitory to drive out to a small refreshment stand with the boys for cold drinks.

Miss Beauchamp was driving the car and a car which was approaching from the rear was said to have side-swiped the one in which the young people were riding, forcing it into the soft sand at the side of the road where it overturned, pinning Miss Beauchamp under the wreckage. Death is thought to have occurred with her instantly.

The other girls who were badly shaken up and bruised were taken to the hospital in Denton, the young men, all of whom were from Dallas, were taken to that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Beauchamp, with several of their intimate friends, went to Denton as soon as the news of the accident came to Arlington and accompanied the body of their daughter back here.

Funeral services were held in the Arlington Baptist Church Saturday afternoon at 2 o’clock with Moore Funeral Home in charge of the arrangements. Rev. W. T. Rouse, pastor of the church, was assisted by Rev. S. M. Bennett of the Presbyterian Church in officiating at the services.

Both of these pastors, who knew the young lady well, made appropriate remarks concerning her life and gave comfort to the bereaved father and mother as far as was humanly possible.

Grace was, and had been for several years, a loyal member of the Baptist Church. She had spent eleven of her twenty years as a resident of Arlington, having moved to this place with her family from Dallas, her birthplace, when a very small girl. All of her school life, up to the past September when she matriculated in C.I.A. as a junior was spent in Arlington schools. She had previously graduated from Arlington High School and also last June from N.T.A.C. She had taken part in many of the social and serious activities of school and community life. She was a member of the Assembly of Rainbow Girls and had served this organization as its Worth Advisor. The Rainbow Girls of the Arlington Assembly were honorary pall bearers at the funeral, and also composed the choir. They escorted the body to its resting place in Parkland cemetery in a body and performed the ritual service of the order in her honor.

Grace was the only child of her parents and as such was loved with a rare devotion by them. Her death has left the family desolate, but the deep and lasting love and sympathy of their friends and relatives has sustained them in their grief, which only time and Divine love may soften and sanctify.

A Tribute To Grace Beauchamp
By Norwood Hiett

There are great, tense moments in the lives of all individuals when the deepest pathos, feeling, and sympathy of a human soul are submerged in darkest uncertainty and doubt. Sympathetic spirits and unavailing hands stand mute and helpless during these trials. Try as we may we cannot strip death of its (unreadable) neither can we by the wildest and most fantastic flight of our imagination fill the aching void left by the vacant chair, the stilled voice and the hushed footsteps. Truly, and unmistakably we are, while in life, in the midst of death, and day after day we are tragically reminded that man that is born of woman is of few days and that often times even as a tender flower he is cut down in the midst of his beauty and comeliness. Life at best is a flickering star that hovers between two eternities, a shadow that passes in the night. How easy it is for one who has never felt the fading pulse beat or never sat beside the bed at midnight and watched the swift ebb of life to tell others of how lightly they should regard the unsought guest. Those who have experienced these times that try men’s souls realize more and more the feebleness and futility of such miserable comforts.

We meet our friends and family from day to day quite unaware of their virtues, their friendly presence, and kindly smiles and then suddenly they are no more and we find ourselves recounting their little acts of kindness, their sympathetic words, and their kindly counsel. I found myself in such a position this week when word of the tragic death of Grace Beauchamp was brought to me. For several years Grace was in a little circle of young people whom I taught in a church class. She was one of the kindest, most sympathetic girls I ever knew. Often times when those little perplexing problems that vex groups would arise I have never seen her manifest a mean, ugly critical attitude or regard mawkishly those things beyond her control. She took the joys and sorrows of life as they came and no one would have faced the shadow land more courageously and philosophically than she had the circumstances of her going been those of long anticipation. I shall be a better person as a result of having known her as will all who knew her best.

How it behooves us to love, to serve, to sympathize and to enjoy life to its fullness during our transient stay. This she did, and life to her was one great opportunity for radiant activity and pleasure. Nothing was joy to her that took from the happiness of others. Always mindful of others she found delight in doing little acts of kindness for her friends. Time will partially remove the sting of death, and increasing years will more deeply enshrine the memories of those whom we have learned to love and lost. We find some comfort in the fact that death is the common lot of all. None of us know what lies beyond the realm of shadows but we do know that the very occasional presence of the shadows is the best proof that somewhere the sun is shining. I believe that so definite a thing as personality is never lost, that good is eternal, and that love must find the object of its desire though separated from it for a reason. I know that somewhere out beyond the curtainéd silence we shall face activity, that our greatest ambitions will find their fulfillment. I believe that we shall know as we are known, and that we shall face eternal life in a land where we are told a thousand years are as a day.

Interurban Discontinue Service on Dec. Fifteen

Electric interurban service will be discontinued on or about Dec. 15, according to an announcement issued by Ft. Worth officials recently. This action has been taken due to the fact that a great deal of money has been lost in continuing the operation of this railway service between Ft. Worth and Dallas during the past few years.

Arlington citizens will miss the service extended them by the interurbans. They have been the means of building the city, the convenience of the citizens, and have been the source of employment for many of them. N.T.A.C. students have found them handy in the past.

Tickets not used before the discontinuance of the road will be redeemed or transferred to use on the busses in operation on the Bankhead highway.

Tracks may be taken up and sold; however, definite announcement has not been issued regarding this move.

This will be the first time in numbers of years that Arlington has been silent all day along Abram street.

Traffic, formerly carried on by interurbans, will be taken care of by the Texas Motorcoaches.

In 1901, the Bishop Sherwin Syndicate of Cleveland, Ohio, at that time owning and operating the street railway in the City of Fort Worth, made application to the State of Texas for permission to extend its electric car operation from its tracks in the City of Fort Worth through the counties of Tarrant and Dallas to connect with electric lines operating in Dallas. On April 5, 1901, an emergency bill was passed by the State Legislature, giving to the Northern Texas Traction Company the right to construct the interurban line. At that time no law existed which authorized the organization of a private corporation for the purpose of constructing and operating interurban electric railways, so it was necessary to apply to the State for this right and not to the counties and cities through which the interurban line was to be constructed.

Under the terms of the Act passed the company was empowered to condemn any lands and other properties necessary in the operating of said interurban. No right was given to construct or operate any street railway service within the City of Dallas except as necessary to make proper entrance and connections with existing lines. The width of the right of way through lands condemned was restricted to 200 feet.

Construction work was started as soon as possible after April 5, and was completed in July 1902. The line consisted of single track, with numerous sidings. Service was inaugurated in July 1902. Hourly schedules were operated from 6:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. with a running time of one hour and thirty-five minutes. Service was furnished with five passenger cars, using air storage tanks in breaking (sic). In 1906, breaking (sic) facilities were improved by the installation of air compressors.

In 1906 the Northern Texas Traction Company came under the management of Stone & Webster, Incorporated. The property at that time consisted of the city lines in Fort Worth, the Fort Worth Dallas Interurban, and the street car lines in Oak Cliff.

The interurban line was a success from the start and in 1908 it was necessary to put on additional schedules. At that time limited cars operating on the half hour from 7:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. were started, making the run in one hour and fifteen minutes. Modern car equipment was purchased for this operation.

In 1912 the original five cars were sold to the Fort Worth Southern Traction Company, which started operation between Fort Worth and Cleburne, and new car equipment purchased replacing them. At that time, the interurban line was double tracked to Cleburne Junction. Additional double tracking became necessary from Cleburne Junction to Siding 6, approximately five miles from Fort Worth, and through a portion of Oak Cliff.

Service was further improved through limited cars at 6:30 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. and 8:30 p.m. during war times when soldiers were in training in both Fort Worth and Dallas. Additional double track was constructed at Dalworth and Arlington in the years 1918 to 1920 and block signals installed for further safety of passengers.

The peak of riding and revenues was reached in 1922 when 3,879,200 revenue passengers were carried and earnings were $1,575,200. About this time the increase in automobiles produced and improved good roads became major factors as effecting (sic) riding...
The Arlington Journal, Arlington, Texas. 1934 and decline in both riding and revenue started. A short time later, scattered “jitney” operation with Ford cars started which was later replaced with more expensive equipment. No regular schedule was operated by these “jitneys” and cars ran only when a full load was obtained.

In December 1924, the Dallas-Fort Worth Safety Coach Company was organized and began operation with eight buses. These buses operated on a half hour headway and only during the more profitable parts of the day.

A rate war was soon developed between the “jitneys” and the Safety Coach Company which reduced the competitive fare with the interurban to 50 cents between Dallas and Fort Worth. Because of numerous replacements of “jitney” owners, they were able to survive and the Safety Coach Company was forced into receivership and later dissolved. The “jitney” continued operation in a very haphazard manner.

The operating rights of the independent “jitney” operators were purchased in September, 1927 and a new company was chartered and has operated since that time under the name of Texas Motorcoaches, Incorporated. New buses were purchased for this operation.

The trend of interurban earnings has been downward each year since 1920, until in 1933, only 483,800 revenue passengers were handled and revenue amounted to $175,200. You will note the large decrease in revenue passengers and earnings, comparing the years 1920 and 1933 as shown herein. This large decrease is not attributable to revenues lost to bus operation except in a limited way. The interurban is daily carrying many more passengers than the bus lines operating between Fort Worth and Dallas. The major portion of the loss in patronage on the interurban is due to improved highway and the constantly increasing use of private automobiles.

When interurban operation is abandoned, the service of Texas Motorcoaches, Incorporated, will be increased to adequately handle all business now being carried on interurban cars.

THREE DALLAS YOUTHS ARE INDICTED

Three Dallas youths have been indicted, charged with transporting liquor, in connection with an accident which occurred on Nov. 22 near Lake Dallas and in which Miss Grace Beauchamps, 22, Arlington girl, was instantly killed.

The three boys are W. P. Britton, 24, Grady Martin 24, and Larry Whitman, 28. Larry Whitman is accused of having been drunk at the time of the accident.

Contrary to the first reports that were circulated saying that Miss Beauchamp was driving the car, further investigation has revealed that one of the young men was at the wheel. The definite cause of the accident has police officials puzzled. First reports said that the car was side-swiped by another automobile. Now, however, County Attorney Judge Gambill and Sheriff J. C. Cockrell of Dallas County will neither say definitely whether or not a second car was even involved.

The other two girls who were in the accident and who were neither one seriously hurt are Miss Melba Davis, 20, of Dallas and Miss Virginia Looney of Calvert. Martin was the only boy seriously hurt. He was unconscious, due to a head injury, and was treated in a Dallas hospital.

Evidence is now being gathered in an attempt to solve the entire affair.

Though the indictments were returned Saturday, they were not made public until Tuesday night when Britton was arrested. The other two boys are free. The bond for Britton has been set at $1,500, and his release on bond was brought about Wednesday.

OLD FASHIONED SEWAGE METHOD BEING REMOVED FROM ARLINGTON

Mr. Wells, in connection with the County Health Department, is in charge of a move to rid Arlington of all privies, which have been termed unsanitary and a menace to the health of the general public. In place of these old time relics, this department has been installing the latest pit toilets.

Nearly the entire town has been covered and ridded of the offenders. Eighty-five pit toilets have been installed in Arlington in the last three months. It is hoped that soon there will be so few privies left that the remaining ones can be condemned and the owners forced to adopt more progressive sewage.
The very least cost has been charged those putting in modern equipment. Mr. Well’s crew of welfare labor is used in the actual construction and the owner is charged for the materials only, a cost of about $5.

Anyone who has a complaint about the old fashioned method of sewage, or anyone wishing one of these modern pit toilets installed are advised to call City Manger Morgan at the City Hall for further information and arrangements.

Mr. Wells is also in charge of the latest methods of mosquito control and cleaning up and draining of offensive water holes in Arlington. This, too, is being carried on with the help of the County Health Department.

Last N.T.T. Co. Interurban on Tracks Mon.

The last interurban will run over the Ft. Worth-Dallas tracks on Monday, Dec. 24, according to reports issued by the Northern Texas Traction Company Monday.

Bus service running through Arlington will be begun by the Texas Motorcoaches on Dec. 20. The route will be run a few days before the interurbans stop in order that Arlington citizens may get more used to it and make arrangements to change their patronage from the interurbans to the buses.

As a result of a second petition signed by numbers of citizens, J. M. Houston reports that Mr. Townsend, of Ft. Worth, whom he talked to Monday in conference, has announced the route the buses will take through Arlington. The eastbound motorcoach will enter Arlington on Abram, turn north on Pecan to Main, turn east on Main to Mesquite, south on Mesquite to Abram, east on Abram to Collins, and north on Collins to the highway. Those coming from Dallas will follow the same route in reverse order.

The bus will not turn north on Center, as previously reported but will cross that street in going down Main.

After the disbanding of the interurban offices here, the bus service will establish an office on commission in some downtown drug store.

Arlington citizens will get a negative Christmas present in the form of a farewell to this town’s age-old friend, the interurban service, and will receive an additional present in the way of the introduction of the “through Arlington” bus service.

Eight new buses will be added to the line and the schedule run on a twenty minute-forty minute service basis from both Dallas and Ft. Worth.

Friday December 14  ARLINGTON WILL MISS COLONEL WAGGONER
Last rites have been said for the racing king of Texas and the builder of Arlington Downs, W. T. Waggoner, 82, who succumbed following a second stroke of paralysis at a Ft. Worth hospital Wednesday morning.
A lover of cattle and a wealthy oil magnate, W. T. Waggoner had been only recently pronounced Ft. Worth's most useful citizen at a Golden Deeds banquet given by the Ft. Worth Exchange Club. He was awarded this honor due to the facts that he had developed the $2,000,000 horse racing establishment at Arlington Downs, that he had contributed to the upbuilding of Ft. Worth and that he had given so many worthy gifts to charities and other good causes all over the country.
Mr. Waggoner is designated as the wealthiest man in Texas. He possessed hundreds of oil wells in his five hundred thousand acres of land in five counties of Northwest Texas.
He died without fulfilling his ambition, that of breeding a winner for the Kentucky Derby.
Mr. Waggoner's friends and admirers viewed his body, which lay in state at a Ft. Worth funeral home Wednesday afternoon for the last time. Thursday, private funeral services, at which only the immediate relatives were present, were conducted at the home by Dr. J. N. R.
Score. After the private services, burial was at 11 a.m. at the family mausoleum at the East Oakwood Cemetery. This was open to the public.

W. T. Waggoner is survived by his wife and two children.

W. G. Hiett, of Arlington, was among the pall bearers.

Arlington will miss this builder of the Arlington Downs in many ways. He can be named as one of the greatest contributors to Arlington’s development and prosperity. It has been stated that he built Arlington Downs, not with individual profit in mind, but with the idea that he was bringing back to Texas the real love of blue-blooded horses, which he himself had. During the entire time of the races here, he has been against shoddy gambling, which seems to follow the tracks, and thought that the leaders of the sport themselves must do something to put a stop to it.

The entire country will miss this man. Arlington adds her small part to the volumes of words of sympathy that are pouring in to the Waggoner family.

TEXAS CHURCH HISTORY

DALLAS (Special) – Stories of the advent of the Catholic missionaries in Texas are familiar to all who peruse relations of the early history of Texas as the celebrations of the Centennial of the State’s independence in 1936 by many of the cities of the State approach, but the Protestant churches also, even prior to the revolution, turned their eyes to what is now the Lone Star State as a fertile field and the Methodist was the first of these to enter the new territory.

The pathfinder for all the southwestern frontier of Methodism was William Stevenson, who was born in South Carolina in 1768 and died in 1857. As early as 1817, he preached and organized a class at Jonesboro on the Red River, but this was done under the impression that it was United States territory. Henry Stevenson, a Methodist preacher, stationed in Rapides Parish, La., paid brief visits to Texas in 1824 and 1829, without holding services, although in the latter year a meeting was held near the Sabine River, in Louisiana, at which many Texans joined the church.

In 1832, after the expulsion of the Mexican soldiers from Nacogdoches, Needham J. Alvord, a Methodist, and Sumner Bacon, a Cumberland Presbyterian, held a two-day meeting near where the town of Milam now stands, in spite of some opposition.

J. P. Stevenson, held three meetings in Sabine County, then a part of the municipality of San Augustine, in 1833. These were a two-day meeting near Milam and two camp-meetings at S. B. McMahan’s place, nine miles east of San Augustine. The first of the latter, held in July, resulted in several conversions.

At the second camp-meeting, in September, a regular church organization was effected with forty-eight members and Major Samuel B. McMahan was appointed class leader. In July, 1834, the first Methodist Church to be organized within what were then known to be the limits of Texas was established in McMahan’s home.

Parents of Donald Fay Say He Is 16 Years of Age

The case of the State versus Donald Fay, reported 16 years old, a jockey at Arlington Downs, who is being held without bond in the Ft. Worth Tarrant county jail on murder charges, is at present at a standstill.

Investigation has been taken out of the hands of local police. It is not known whether anything of note has been found at the present time.

Donald Fay is on record at the Downs as 17 years old, an age which makes him liable to the death penalty or prison sentence, should he be found guilty. Following his arrest, however, his mother, who is at present in Hollywood, Cal., wired officials that his age could be proved to be only sixteen. His father, in Houston at the time of the murder, wrote the boy and at length came to Fort Worth to be with him, saying in both letter and when he arrived in that city that Donald is only sixteen. If that can be proved to be true, as both his parents state it can, Donald would only be sent to the reformatory should he be found guilty. He would not be liable to either a prison sentence or a death penalty.

The family of T. W. Watson, 80, the victim of this murder, have again said that they will neither prosecute or persecute Donald Fay, but wish to give him every opportunity to prove his innocence. Any case to be brought has been brought by the State.

THE SONG OF THE PACIFIC

This poem was written by Olin Griffin of Arlington in memory of the Australian flyers. It was written in December, 1934. The poem follows:

To those intrepid ones who dare
To venture westward, high in air,
I sing a siren’s song, quite low,
They seem to hear it as they go---

For looking in my smiling face
They feel secure! With swift winged grace,
They head toward the setting sun
And seem to think the game is won.

I raise my voice and sing a dirge;
A motor’s hum drowns out my words.
On! On they speed! defying fate,
While I smile on and sing and wait!

The waiting does not take so long,
And once again, I change my song,
THIS TIME I sing a lullaby,
For in my arms the brave ones lie.

Friday December 28  Family Pet Killed On Highway

Jack, the big collie dog belonging to the Walter Taylor family on Center street, was killed Tuesday night, struck by an automobile.

Members of the Taylor family feel that almost one of their family, so to speak, has left them. Jack, almost 17 years old, is about the same age and has been with the Taylor family as long as has Barbee, the oldest of the children. He was a favorite, faithful helper of the children, whom he often took care of and whom he escorted to town.

Jack had been playing in the house only a few minutes before Mrs. Taylor let him out and, as he crossed the highway, he was killed instantly. It is hard for the family to understand how he got in the way of the car for he was so careful about automobiles, and often helped the children cross the street.

Wednesday Jack was laid to rest under the cherry tree in the backyard without a single witness—for the Taylor children are going to remember their old pal and pet just as he was in life. His head was placed so that it pointed to the West by special request of the children.
